Boeing announces American order for 26 737-800s

SEATTLE (AP) — Chicago-based Boeing Company has announced new orders by American Airlines for 26 737-800 aircraft.

The single-aisle planes are worth $1.9 billion at list prices, although airlines typically negotiated substantial discounts on large orders. Twenty of the planes represent exercised options and six weren't covered in previous deals.

The orders come a day after American announced a fleet renewal plan that includes earlier delivery of some planes that had been ordered in the past.

Part of that deal is to move up the delivery of six 737-800s to 2010 as American replaces its aging and less efficient MD-80s.

Oil down on weak demand

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell about a dollar Thursday, pulling back from the previous day's rally as waning U.S. demand for energy overshadowed supply threats from the conflict in Georgia.

Crude fell as low as $112.59 a barrel before settling at $115.01 as traders continued to ponder Wednesday's U.S. Energy Department report on weekly fuel inventories.
